Austin, TX – The Texas Appraiser Licensing and Certification Board (TALCB) is pleased to announce the launch of its new logo and website: talcb.texas.gov. The new website is designed with the needs of various users in mind. Applicants, license holders, and the public will now be able to easily access information that is more relevant to their specific needs.

The new site includes a dedicated consumer section where home owners and buyers can get information about the appraisal process, learn what to expect from an appraisal, and access contact information about a specific appraiser. This section of the site will also include articles, links, and other material to ensure consumers in Texas are well informed on issues pertaining to the appraisal and home buying process. It also contains information and links about how to file a complaint with the agency about an appraiser or appraisal management company.

The site has specific sections dedicated to applicants and current license holders where the user can find information pertaining to the application process and specific licensing requirements. These sections also provide applicants and license holders quick access to relevant forms, frequently asked questions, and other related information.

The new TALCB website incorporates the new agency logo and employs a responsive design, which allows users to access the website on any computer or mobile device, without reducing available content.

This new, revamped website is the next step in embracing technology to educate license holders and the public and safeguard Texas consumers more effectively. Please be sure to check the website regularly for updates from the agency.
